Academic Implications

- Grades of D, I, F, AB, DR, or NG are considered deficiencies in a student's academic status at the university.
- A grade of D is unsatisfactory. A student must re-enroll in the course within the next two consecutive semesters and earn a grade of C or better to earn the course credits where university policy requires it.
- A grade of I indicates that a student completed a substantial part of the course with satisfactory performance but could not complete all requirements. It may be converted to a letter grade when requirements are met within the next two consecutive semesters.
- A grade of F represents failure. The student must re-enroll in the course and earn a grade of C or better to earn course credits.
- A grade of AB indicates that the student did not take the final examination and provided documented evidence for that inability.
- A grade of DR indicates that the student exceeded the three excused absences allowed and must re-enroll to earn course credits.
- A grade of NG indicates that the student registered for the course but failed to officially withdraw or attend classes.
- A grade of W indicates an official withdrawal approved through the Office of the Registrar after consultation with the instructor and department chair and/or dean.

Mention and honor thresholds are to be confirmed by the Registrar before final transcript publication.
